This could describe any tuition hike at any university from the past 30 years, only replace "PPE" with "whatever the PR firm told us is the acceptable excuse this year."

And of course, with a captive market of undergrads who can't leave without finishing their degree...

last night at dinner it was the typical question of whether quantum beach miami could really 'happen,' or if it was back to san francisco, and then someone weakly interjected "but what about austin techSaaS"

The numbers are clear, 3X tech moved to Austin vs Miami this last year on the LinkedIn data.

Austin is a real tech scene & lots of multi billionaire tech founders have moved here and are building. We just don't feel the need to make it a competition - that's more Miami energy

No contest that EcoHealth received a grant from NIH, or that $600k of that went to WIV. But the work described in that grant application doesn't come anywhere near gain-of-function (reporter.nih.gov/search/bvPCvB...), and that's reflected in the academic publications from that grant

That's not what's going on here. If you'd like to learn more about pseudotyping (which isn't gain-of-function/DURC) you can read here:

2/2 This being the case, the governing/media tribe had no real external brake on its activities, its integrity depended on the self application of internalized moral & ethical codes. An outsider could only pray that these insiders had sound compasses & the character to apply them

The irony is that their global "human rights" regime is rooted originally in natural law jurisprudence. It's arguably a corruption of natural law, but things like the Universal Declaration and other liberal documents wouldn't exist at all without the tradition of natural law.

I wish it were just Blackrock consolidation, China buying Texas, et al.

Don't forget that inflation applies to real estate prices as well, and the little nest-egg you had hoped to use as a down payment will plummet in real purchasing power.

J. @PresentWitness
The real estate 'bubble' is Americans realizing en masse that if they don't buy a house now, they may never be able to as institutional money from Blackrock and other foreign investment floods the single family home market and prices them out permanently

Interest ng observation

Boroditsky (2009a) speaks about the impact of language on how one is oriented in the world and the resultant behavior

> Instead of words like "right," "left," "forward," and "back," which, as commonly used in English, define space relative to an observer, the Kuuk Thaayorre, like many other Aboriginal groups, use cardinal-direction terms — north, south, east, and west — to define space. This is done at all scales, which means you have to say things like "There's an ant on your southeast leg" or "Move the cup to the north northwest a little bit." (p. 120)
> The result is a profound difference in navigational ability and spatial knowledge between speakers of languages that rely primarily on absolute reference frames (like Kuuk Thaayorre) and languages that rely on relative reference frames (like English). Simply put, speakers of languages like Kuuk Thaayorre are much better than English speakers at staying oriented and keeping track of where they are, even in unfamiliar landscapes or inside unfamiliar buildings. What enables them — in fact, forces them — to do this is their language. Having their attention [the way the world occurs for them] trained in this way equips them to perform navigational feats once thought beyond human capabilities. (p. 121)[72]

Great article! So many commentators say "housing crisis" to mean "why can't I afford rent downtown?" But @ad_mastro is raising alarm about a national crisis--tied up with our other national crises of corporate exploitation, urban decline, and attacks on small business.

The blue check is the modern day Mark of Cain blame and punish for the explosion of their beautiful dream

But they're also just very simple and provincial. They can't think

1 6 35

Doctor-Baron 17cShyteposter, DDS @17cShyteposter 58m
So while it's true that they love control and punishment - this is why Foucault is their most cited scholar, they're constantly explaining themselves to themselves, much as they invented "gas lighting" to explain the process of what they do to normal people -

1 1 26

Doctor-Baron 17cShyteposter, DDS @17cShyteposter 5m
The leftist process must be understood not as stemming from immediate control and punishment, but as

Utopian ideal >

Failure >

Insecurity >

Intense rage >

Displacement of that failure onto "counter revolutionaries," whoever that might be in the current time and place

2 8 38

Doctor-Baron 17cShyteposter, DDS @17cShyteposter 16m
So when a "policy-driven Acela liberal" like @mattyglesias says he wants to hold us all down and vaccinate us (which he's since deleted), it's not because his policies are working. It's because they are failing

He has the best intentions

But when he fails, he then hates you

2 2 8

Doctor-Baron 17cShyteposter, DDS Follow
@17cShyteposter

That's why it's critical to understand the leftist process not as one of inherent malevolence, but as a lashing-out when it's failing.

Once it starts to lash out, that's how you know—whatever the "data, stats," whatever—that it's not working how the utopians thought it would.

It will always reach this state, of course, by the nature of its provincial utopianism

But the lashing-out response is how you know it's failed, and that they're about to start lying to you, and blaming you for its own failure, and it's time to start reacting accordingly through the intercession of the Virgin Mary.[1 2][2] So serious was Kolbe about this goal that he added to the Miraculous Medal prayer:

Is this the correct way to phrase the miraculous medal prayer?

> O Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee. And for all those who do not have recourse to thee; especially the Freemasons and all those recommended to thee.[13]

Which questions?

21 4 86

owen cyclops @owenbroadcast · Aug 13
so you can always pass the onus over to something else for any one condition but if God actually made the universe from nothing then none of those conditions had to be the way that they are, they all could have been tweaked, so theres nothing outside to appeal to.

3 52

owen cyclops @owenbroadcast · Aug 13
so if you zoom in on any one thing with in a small frame u can say, well actually this was caused by X or Y or this guy is Z or that thing is W but if you keep zooming out, if God made the world from nothing all those conditions ultimately go back to him + could have been changed

4 45

owen cyclops @owenbroadcast · Aug 13
because it puts u in a very difficult situation where all genocide, guys getting stabbed, baby w some weird disease, it all could have not been like that, but ultimately for some reason God made it that way it basically makes God the author of evil, which we're told is impossible

Connor @mementofines
Yes...? I thought that was implied with God's simultaneous coexistence with every moment in time. What's the conundrum here?

4 46

owen cyclops @owenbroadcast · Aug 13
I had an explanation worked out for this where I could just appeal to, for example, free will guy murders a kid, well he has free will, so, God didnt do it. but if you take the mans nature and all of the factors that led him to do that if ur working ex nihilo God set all that

11 46

owen cyclops @owenbroadcast · Aug 13
so its just a tentative explanation that feels like it falls apart off screen, if God set ALL the starting conditions for the universe + made everything from scratch he could have set it up so that things like that or specific things could have not happened but that isnt the case

You can sense a tension w/r/t the varying forms of European fascism in the background of this definition. To the extent they claim to be based on mythology, what's important for Strauss is how genuine that claim is.

Let's push to ban assault rifles in the US - but pay your taxes so we can buy 358,530 assault rifles for known terrorists and also 64,363 machine guns and some attack helicopters and this other gear, too.

Also, there is no need to secure our borders.

Got it.

It's a purposeful retreat from definitively overturning Roe.

Granting requests for an emergency stay would have required the conservatives to approve a court order recognizing the requestors' harm on a constitutional basis. They could have easily cited privacy to do so. However:

By citing privacy they would implicitly be endorsing Roe, which is a bridge too far

Now, they could have chosen to issue a stay "sua sponte" giving them the leeway to choose on what grounds they had issued the stay (i.e., not limited to the grounds laid out by requestors). BJT

The only option for such a sua sponte stay would be if the law (and by extension, Roe) merited consideration on constitutional grounds. If you start that conversation, the dominos will fall by necessity.

So a sizeable faction on the court is avoiding getting locked into that.

The SCOPA is the court of last resort for questions related to the state constitution.

So I'm not sure what the point of this is.

> Wolf's administration then asked the state's elected Supreme Court, which is 5-2 Democratic-majority and has become notorious for partisan rulings, to grant all the Democrats' requests—and they did on Sep. 17. The court went further than expected, granting the Democrats' deadline extension, approving drop boxes and satellite "election offices" for ballot collection, and even ruling that postmarks could not be used to verify when ballots had been mailed.

Pro: So many paradigm shifts laid out so clearly. Bureaucracy, expertise, defining incentives...excellent.

Con: Yarvin suffers from brutal pessimism and "nothing-ever-happens-ism"...as well as an undeserved adulation for his own social class that limits his creativity.

I enjoyed Always With Honor, although Wrangel was a little more uptight. Despite his higher breeding Obolensky strikes me as taking a broader, more cultivated and philosophical view of his people's struggle.

For many Americans, ideas are just a veneer for tribal animosity and resentment that has been fomenting for decades because of failed policies from the 60s, 70s, 80s. Visceral animosity along lines like rural vs. urban, old vs. young. Even if minds could be changed, hearts? Hm.

I realized then that Russia would have to go through a blood bath, for her people no longer realized what liberty meant and they did not understand. It could only be after terrific pain and hardship that they would be able to comprehend that the Bolshevik government was not the government they wanted. In the meantime, it was useless to fight for them. And I decided to try to get the family out of the Crimea and out of Russia.

It was about this time that we learned that the Czar had been taken to Siberia. Many of the men wanted to fight things out and go to rescue him.

The Siberian officer had by now recovered, and led a raiding party,

And the kids? They just want out of the factory, fast fwd to graduation.

"We have a new type of rule now. Not one-man rule, or rule of aristocracy or plutocracy, but of small groups elevated to positions of absolute power by random pressures and subject to political and economic factors that leave little room for decision.

They are representatives of abstract forces who have reached power through surrender of self. The iron-willed dictator is a thing of past.

There will be no more Stalins, no more Hitlers.

The rulers of this most insecure of all worlds are rulers by accident. Inept, frightened pilots at the controls of a vast machine they cannot understand, calling in experts to tell them which buttons to push."

Bacon l sted four ido s or i lusions.

They are, in reverse order, past ph osophical doctrines, common anguage, the ind vidua 's upbring ng, passions, and exper ences, and the senses.

What are the consequences of this critique? They're not pretty

Luke Foster @gurueL ke · 2h

I just taught Bacon to my students yesterday n a class on the history of the l beral arts, and I was struck by how much he resonated with them. This outlook and susp cion of the dols seemed entirely intuitive, though they also wanted to save the human ties

This picture is misleading, it implies that this is what will continue to happen if those opposing #RGGI are successful. But it is actually a facility in the Ukraine which has few if any environmental controls. This portrayal of emissions simply does not exist in PA.

NathanBenefield @NathanBenefield 17m

Not only is it misleading; but those pushing RGGI and other draconian regulations and taxes would only drive more energy production to Ukraine, Russia, and China

"That murder was, like, two weeks ago, man."

The CEO of Nike praised top executive Larry Miller for admitting in a Wednesday interview that he murdered a teenager in 1985.

Miller's "story is an example of the resilience, perseverance and strength of the human spirit," CEO John Donahoe wrote in a statement about his colleague. Miller, the chairman of Nike's Jordan brand, told Sports Illustrated that when he was a 16-year-old member of Philadelphia's Cedar Avenue gang, he killed 18-year-old Edward White, a presumed member of the rival 53rd and Pine gang, in retribution for the killing of a friend.

"Miller did not know the victim, or whether he had anything to do with the stabbing of his friend, or even whether he had any connection to the 53rd and Pine gang," Sports Illustrated reported.

Donahoe, who called Miller "a beloved member of the Nike family," said he hopes Miller's experience "can create a healthy discourse around criminal justice reform, by helping remove the stigma that holds people and communities back."

Americans cannot have equality in freedom, even strictly under the law, because that would require equality in capacity for responsibility. Children, for example, do not have the same freedoms as adults.

Andrew, would you mind expounding here. Who does children should have less freedom because of their lower 'capacity for responsibility'?

Andrew Cuff @AndrewJCuff · 11m
Does there need to be other categories for the point to hold true? But there are other categories. For example, you could say people in poverty have de facto less freedom under the law, since they can't afford the same level of legal representation.

Andrew Cuff @AndrewJCuff · 11m
And people of wealth have less freedom to keep the money they earn due to progressive taxation. Physically impaired people have less freedom of movement, and mentally impaired people have less freedom of speech.

People are different and are accorded different opportunities, yes, even by law. This has been sometimes more, sometimes less true at many points throughout American history.

I agree with the conclusion but not with how Mitchell arrives at it. The reason it's wrong to lower standards is not because "everyone has equality of opportunity, so it's all fair."

It's because lower standards = 3rd world USA. Fin. QED. It's the outcomes I'm focused on.

Another big example is radical leftist labor unions. Republicans everywhere have to deal with the fact that their working-class voters want collective bargaining but hate that their hard-earned money goes to Nancy Pelosi, Planned Parenthood, et al.

My second quest on is how far back does the unbroken chain of Anno Domini dates go?

We certainly have orig nal documents dated to each year from the present to 1,500 AD. We just as certa n y don't have such a chain back to 0 AD

But when does it break?

Empty America @T erra Y C e o 1h suspect that the answer to both of these is going to be shockingly late, around 1,000AD or ater

Keep in m nd, we are ta k ng original manuscripts. Meaning a p ece of vellum or whatever created n 600AD, dated 600AD

Not a copy from 1,200 that says "600 AD."

(3) How do you explain these odd little everyday phenomena with which everyone is familiar:

You have seen yourself a thousand times in the mirror, face to face. No sight is more familiar. Yet why is it that the first time you see yourself in a clothier's triple mirror—from the side, so to speak—it comes as a shock? Or the first time you saw yourself in a home movie: were you embarrassed? What about the first time you heard your recorded voice—did you recognize it? Clearly, you should, since you've been hearing it all your life.

Why is it that, when you are shown a group photograph in which you are present, you always (and probably covertly) seek yourself out? To see what you look like? Don't you know what you look like?

Has this ever happened to you? You are walking along a street of stores. There are other people walking. You catch a glimpse in a store window of a reflection of a person. For a second or so you do not recognize the person. He, she, seems a total stranger. Then you realize it is your own reflection. Then in a kind of transformation, the reflection does in fact become your familiar self

It's becoming increasingly clear that the traditional 19th-c. justice system, particularly the concept of jury trial, cannot survive the mass-media digital age. Our courts make too many naive assumptions about unbiased observers, knowledge, behavior, and even "fairness" & equity.

Paul's letter to the Ephesians chapter 5 says to be "imitators" of Christ and provides a long list of actions that entails.

You can try to use the gospels as a kind of philosophical biography -- Muslims do this with the Hadith -- but the rest of the New Testament is essential.

Does "act" imply a motive force (a se) in the intellect

After the will's command, can the intellect do otherwise than to assent

What does "moved" mean

People say Twitter's explicit embrace of "publisher" TOS is cause to revoke Section 230.

I couldn't agree more, in principle.

But it's jarring to encounter people who still believe Big Tech is subject to U.S. law.

Did you get that from a 90s talk show or something?

A people cannot likely live for long as citizens in one country when they disagree on what human life is (and, therefore, if abortion is murder or not) and what men and women are. Why aren't we explicitly addressing the depth of our division? It's vital. Silence makes it worse

But we now know the embryo is not merely a cell with potential, like a sperm or ovum, or a constituent part of human tissue, like a skin cell. Rather, a distinct human organism comes into existence at conception, and every stage of your biological life, from infancy and childhood to middle age and beyond, is part of a single continuous process that began when you were just a zygote.

We know from embryology, in other words, not Scripture or philosophy, that abortion kills a unique member of the species Homo Naive to imagine that political action can fix the rot in these schools. At most it can cure 1 or 2 symptoms. But (for example) 70% of American public school campuses are indistinguishable, architecturally, from prisons. Activism can't fix that nor the many other systemic issues.

The only 2 groups who profit from inflation are:
(A) corporations like Blackrock with heavily leveraged investments in retail and real estate and

(B) Laptop class with huge student loan payments (loans less "costly" as dollar devalues)

or to go your separate ways

Either path you choose you need to decide what the point is since "resist indoctrination" is pure reaction

1

Colin Redemer @RedemTheTimes 30m
What positive point are you trying to reach? What is the goal?

Simply making enough money to resist oppression and continue a personal intellectual project is not a bad answer But sometimes these groups want more

Colin Redemer @RedemTheTimes 30m
If the goal is to continue studying together in a joint effort of teachers and students to pursue truth wherever it may lead and to disseminate the truth we uncover then that's going to lead to the formation of some new thing

Colin Redemer @RedemTheTimes 30m
And that new thing isn't reactive, and it won't be called "a university" if the university is now the thing preventing this activity The name you call it matters less than the process of formation, the goal, and the continuation of the activity

Conservative attacks on higher ed are mostly nostalgia-posting. The institution as it existed 1950-2000, and the "college experience" it provided, can't exist today. But baby boomers and Gen Xers won't let go -- and will keep pushing their children to enroll.

No, car mechanics are often true artists. They can diagnose symptoms just by listening to the sound of the engine. They route around problems they've never seen before. And they love cars in a way few doctors love health.

Could go on Israel a 9.8 for "Religious Freedom" (do you think that score might be just a TAD inflated already?) But also Israel's "Green Pass" admits no religious exemptions, even for Orthodox Jews. But hey, at least they got their 10/10 for "Same Sex Relationships".

> Cases like that of Douglass Mackey illustrate how many tools governments have in the war on disinformation—and how quickly these tools can become weapons of political power. Mackey posted pro-Trump jokes and memes on Twitter before the 2016 election, but—despite his anonymous identity being "doxxed"—his activity was never deemed criminal until four years later, when the Justice Department charged him with election interference just seven days into Biden's administration. Jail time for Americans with the wrong political opinions has now become an official means of "fortifying" elections against disinformation.

Especially ironic that Peterson has now begun attacking pseudonymous writing, given Sir Roger Scruton's own origin in conservative journalism:

> In 1982, he served as one of the editors of magazine 'The Salisbury Review.' The magazine was yet another attempt at popularizing the ideology of conservatism among the masses. He also wrote many articles for the magazine, mostly under pseudonyms, and later said that the magazine inspired a whole new generation of conservative intellectuals to venture into mainstream politics.

From a friend in #Californ a ...

> Over the exit of the Arrakeen landing field, crudely carved as though with a poor instrument, there was an inscription that Muad'Dib was to repeat many times. He saw it that first night on Arrakis, having been brought to the ducal command post to participate in his father's first full staff conference. The words of the inscription were a plea to those leaving Arrakis, but they fell with dark import on the eyes of a boy who had just escaped a close brush with death. They said: "O you who know what we suffer here, do not forget us in your prayers."

This day in history: on Christmas eve morning, 1851, the Library of Congress burned with most of Thomas Jefferson's personal collection inside.

Among the 35,000 books and documents destroyed were original portraits of founding fathers by Gilbert Stuart, Thomas Jefferson's personal annotated English-language Koran, and a hand-transcribed copy of Byron's lost memoirs, disguised as a "Guide to Needleworke" (rumoured).

It doesn't imply anything about knowledge at all -- transcendence relates only to orders of being and not knowledge. It's possible for a being to transcend another being without knowing it. You might take the example of an infant who is ignorant that he transcends the family cat.

My kids learn through mimicry. It's amazing--once they get comfortable copycatting, they start to improvise, which evolves into creativity/personality. It reminds me that mimesis (not just of nature but of fellow humans' interpretations) is fundamental to what we call "thought".

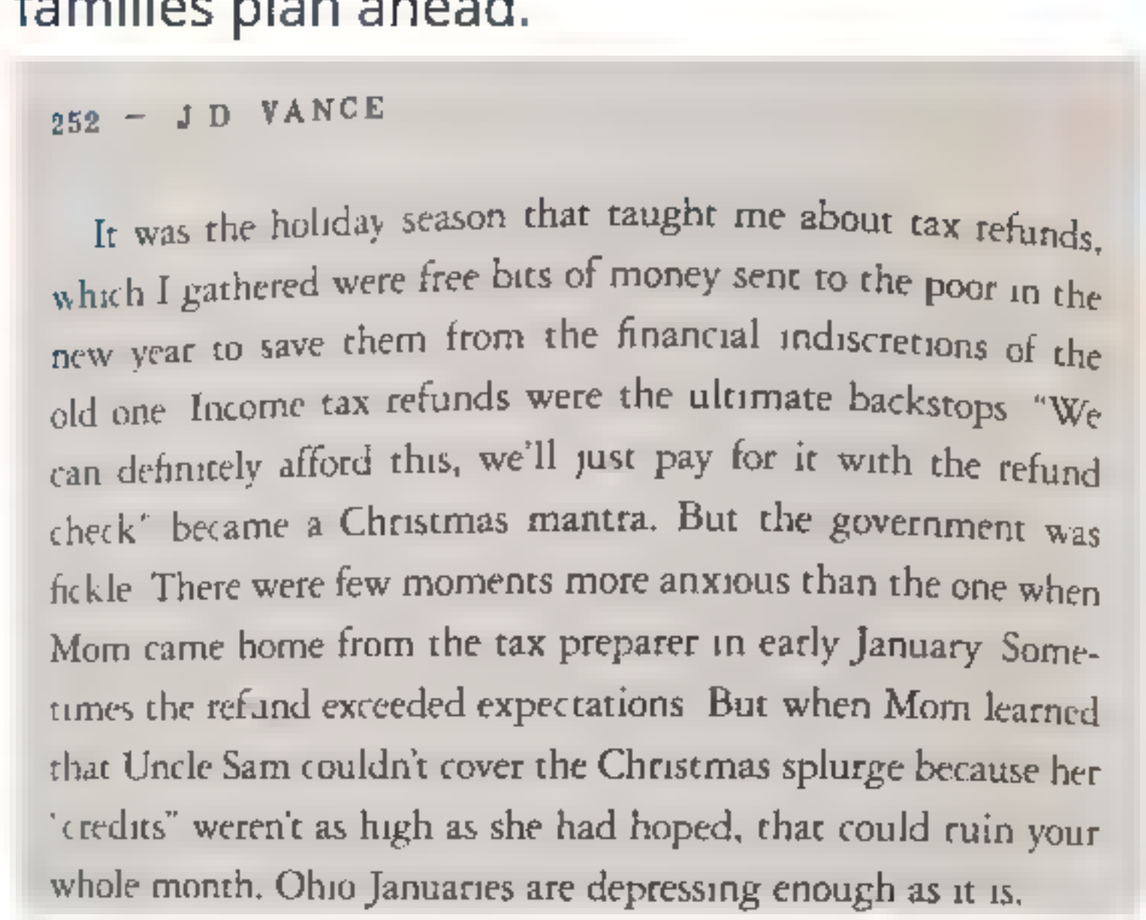
This childhood memory from @JDVance1 Christmas becomes truer every year. The goal shouldn't be arbitrary stimulus checks or "credits" -- but well-paying jobs that help families plan ahead.



252 – J D VANCE

It was the holiday season that taught me about tax refunds, which I gathered were free bits of money sent to the poor in the new year to save them from the financial indiscretions of the old one. Income tax refunds were the ultimate backstops. "We can definitely afford this, we'll just pay for it with the refund check" became a Christmas mantra. But the government was fickle. There were few moments more anxious than the one when Mom came home from the tax preparer in early January. Sometimes the refund exceeded expectations. But when Mom learned that Uncle Sam couldn't cover the Christmas splurge because her "credits" weren't as high as she had hoped, that could ruin your whole month. Ohio Januaries are depressing enough as it is.

I hadn't seen this story, brought to my attention by @GraduatedBen -- just awful behavior from the spiritual leader of 1.2 billion. It's not just misquoting or bad advisors, it's defective character.

> This hatred is not just an American phenomenon. When Cardinal Raymond Burke was hospitalized and put on a ventilator, the first sentence in the Associated Press story about it noted he was a vaccine skeptic. As Burke was fighting for his life on the ventilator, Pope Francis did not offer well wishes or ask for prayer for the cardinal, but instead commented, "Even in the College of Cardinals, there are some anti vaxxers, and one of them, poor man, is in hospital with the virus. But life is ironic." It is a world war.

Something candidates/managers need to remember as they gear up for the midterms.

Staff need:
-Sleep
-Exercise
-Good nutrition
-Decent pay

If your staff is exhausted, sedentary, fed junk, and worried about rent, they will not perform at the level you need.

Treat them well.

If enough people do this, it will hurt them, and because academics play an outsized role in the broader discourse about these issues, there is potential for broader impact.

Like most medieval authors, Hugh draws heavily from Plato and Aristotle, Augustine, Ambrose, Jerome, and the liberal arts tradition to include figures like Boethius and the School of Chartres.

> This, then, is that dignity of our nature which all naturally possess in equal measure,[16] but which all do not equally understand. For the mind, stupefied by bodily sensations and enticed out of itself by sensuous forms, has forgotten what it was, and, because it does not remember that it was anything different, believes that it is nothing except what is seen. But we are restored through instruction, so that we may recognize our nature and learn not to seek outside ourselves what we can find within. Hugh also adapts some of the BEST analogies from antiquity to really help understand concepts like "the soul is in a sense all things" > different thing which it did not have before. We see how a wall receives a likeness when the form of some image or other is put upon it from the outside. But when a coiner imprints a figure upon metal, the metal, which itself is one thing, begins to represent a different thing, not just on the outside, but from its own power and its natural aptitude to do so. It is in this way that the mind, imprinted with the likenesses of all things, is said to be all things and to receive its composition from all things and to contain them not as actual components, or formally, but virtually and potentially.[15]

Mikhail Bulgakov wrote a samizdat novel called The Master and Margarita that you should all read. It's about how the devil and his posse of hell-fiends takes over academia and labor unions. And it's not slow (for a Russian novel)...this is already happening by Chapter 3.

irresistible force and speed. Berlioz made no sound, but all around him the street rang with the desperate shrieks of women's voices. The driver grabbed the electric brake the car pitched forward, jumping the rails, and with a tinkling crash the glass broke in all its windows. At this moment Berlioz heard a despairing voice: "Oh, no . . !" Once more and for the last time the moon flashed before his eyes, but it split into fragments and then went black.

Berlioz vanished from sight under the streetcar, and a round, dark object rolled across the cobbles, over the curbstone and bounced along the sidewalk.

It was a severed head.

> Gun owners and supporters of gun ownership must shift the terms of the gun debate away from special pleading for positive legal rights. If we accept the left's frame of the issue—allowing gun purchases as long as violence does not result—we are forced to take awkward policy stances, like invoking the Dickey Amendment to prevent gun-violence research. Rather, we should recognize the gun owner as the prototypical—if not always the ideal—American citizen.

What's crazy about the whole CDC comorbidity thing, is they started reporting this as far back as May 2021

Also, 75% of deaths have 4+ comorbidities, but when you drill down even further, only 5% died with no comorbidities.

Again, this was published by CDC in May 2021

The deaths with no comorbidities are recorded as "Condition: COVID-19" but it is not at all clear that the hospital tested for comorbidities, or if they did, that they tested for the correct one. Basic medical science would infer that the virus did not randomly kill 5% of people.

Douglass Mackey could be any one of us who has told a joke or had a sense of humor. Help him out.
amgreatness.com/2021/04/12/d.s ... tw.tter.com/TorEkelandPLLC ...

> Cases like that of Douglass Mackey illustrate how many tools governments have in the war on disinformation—and how quickly these tools can become weapons of political power. Mackey posted pro-Trump jokes and memes on Twitter before the 2016 election, but—despite his anonymous identity being "doxxed"—his activity was never deemed criminal until four years later, when the Justice Department charged him with election interference just seven days into Biden's administration. Jail time for Americans with the wrong political opinions has now become an official means of "fortifying" elections against disinformation.

medieval farmers used to bury the Eucharist in their fields according to Burchard of Worms

Nevertheless, it seems reasonably clear from the writings of a German bishop named Burchard of Worms that right around 1000, there were still many customs that some might call "superstitious" but that the faithful practiced. It is possible that many thought these to be more important and more efficacious, if categorically no different, than the Christian sacraments. Surely "practitioners" were impressed with the talismanic power of activities such as the recitation of secret sayings, charms, and incantations (often using Christian words); sacrifices at holy stones, at crossroads, and at wells; and the reliance on amulets, such as the use of holy girdles (to ease the pain of childbirth), and such powers included the consecrated host and relics, sometimes buried in fields for agricultural good fortune. Generally, these were highly practical and functional customs. They were used to harness the power of the deity, to master the elements, and to receive advantages, including protection from the evil forces that inhabited the cosmos of the parishioners and threatened to overwhelm them with adversity.

Higgins, who served in the Army and later in the Pentagon as a career official in the Bush and Obama administrations, according to his biography, was fired from the NSC in 2017 after authoring a memo claiming that a "deep state" band of officials and movements were opposing President Donald Trump. He defined the opposition as the media, Islamists, Black Lives Matter, the ACLU, the United Nations and cultural Marxists leading a coordinated effort to delegitimize and subvert the President.

The perfect actualization of the abstract in the specified is logos, or order Hayek called spontaneous the order arising outside of human purpose. The free market was his preferred example of such spontaneous order. The takeaway is that the world is intelligible to humans. 5/n

Xavier FM @xavierfm3 · Feb 22
Hayek was too quick to suggest such order to be divine, but we must acknowledge his insight about the universal trend toward logos (contra entropy, interestingly). Liberalism claims that the basic social unit is individuals, free to participate in whatever order they please. 6/n

1 1 10

Xavier FM @xavierfm3 · Feb 22
In doing so, it creates a gap between the social structure and the essence of human beings. The ontology is false because the basic social interaction then is between two human beings, with individual interests. It is based on fear and violence. 7/n

1 1 9

Xavier FM @xavierfm3 · Feb 22
Under the liberal framework, free individuals must use reason to arise out of the state of fear and violence. This is why Carl Schmitt said of liberalism that it neutralizes the political. For Schmitt, the political is founded on the distinction between friends and enemies. 8/n Schmitt's F-E distinction is fundamental/organic, not just a response to liberal democracy. "Return to Logos" and "family is the fundamental unit" are true + good slogans, but unfeasible without a discussion of power and how to wield it. This is where Schmitt is most valuable.

and there is no discussion as to when they might (if ever) return. The socialization space has been destroyed as the current masking policy makes the place unattractive for children. Last week, we were not even allowed to browse the children's section and had to find books on our own in a very limited selection housed at the adult section.

Before 2020, the children's programming at the library was first rate. There were almost daily reading hours that involved songs and group activities as well as weekly selected children's stories. Crafting hours happened weekly. We read around books. We attended almost every week — as did many children around town.

Now, after everything else in Latrobe has gone back to meeting in person, all children's programming at the library is still conducted virtually. Many parents may set it to listen and are done with pretending that digital programming offers anywhere near the same quality of experience as meeting in person, where our children can see each other's faces. The global educational experiment of putting small children in front of screens has largely failed, and parents and children want to move on.

America has moved on. Our school district has moved on. Why is our library stuck back in 2020?

Many local parents have started trying to attend other public libraries in our network, hoping for more personal choice in masking. Unfortunately, there is little variation from the intense COVID regulations, and some area libraries are even less welcoming to children and those who opt not to mask. The Mount Pleasant library,

Before 2020, the children's programming at the library was [illegible] rate. There were almost daily reading hours that involved stories and group activities as well as well-selected children's books. Crafting hours happened weekly. Dances around books. We attended almost every week — as did many children around town.

Now, after everything else in Latrobe has gone back to meeting in person, all children's programming at the library is still conducted virtually. Many parents, myself included, are done with pretending that digital programming offers anywhere near the same quality of experience as meeting in person, where our children can see each other's faces. The global educational experiment of putting small children in front of screens has largely failed, and parents and children want to move on.

America has moved on. Our school district has moved on. Why is our library stuck back in 2020?

Many local parents have started trying to attend other public libraries in our network, hoping for more personal choice in masking. Unfortunately, there is little variation from the intense COVID regulations, and some area libraries are even less welcoming to children and those who opt not to mask. The Mount Pleasant library,

It's not accurate to say the reformation is the origin of this idea. Conscience as a type of authority pre-existed the 16th century. E.g. if you read Ratzinger's critique of voluntaristic papal authority you will see that he finds the origin of the idea in Paul, Basil, Augustine.

Thanks. The tweet was intentionally provocatively phrased. A non-280 characters version would emphasize that while pre-Reformation Catholic thought is certainly aware of the importance of conscience, it required the Reformation to give it enough oxygen for it to burst into flame

Or, to change the metaphor, late medieval and early modern Romanism was scarcely a promising soil for the seed of conscience to take root and flourish. The Reformation broke up the stony ground with a sharp plough and dumped the sweet manure of the Word of God on it.

Is your argument that Protestantism introduced the possibility of disagreeing with church authorities? Or increased the ease of doing so? If the former, it seems false. If the latter, it seems hard to argue that it was a positive development (given the subsequent history).

Tucker Carlson never supported this war. He's the most powerful anti-war voice in America, speaking for the majority of people opposed to more wars. This is a pathetic statement from Newsmax and I am not going to be writing for them or going on their network in the future.

Any decently accomplished bureaucracy hacker is able to accomplish things in a way that is indistinguishable from magic.

near Iraq and America was divided. Afghanistan we could understand; word was that was where the enemy was headquartered, but Iraq? Invading a sovereign country without clear provocation struck many of us as wrong or at least left us ambivalent. President Bush came out to give us a pep talk to gin up support and I was in the crowd. I will never forget him saying, "I don't know why our enemy doesn't fear us. We have high-tech apparati." I shit you not, the man said apparati like it was Latin class. One guy in the crowd next to me yelled "WE OUGHTA GO AFTER SADDAM!" The crowd popped and the President laughed. Vince McMahon eat your heart out.

Well they got their war. They even lied to get it, not that it seems to have mattered. (Consequences are just for Proles.) My unit went there after Afghanistan, and among the thousands who died, theirs and ours, one was a Cherry from the first fire-team I led. His nickname was "Van." He deployed to Iraq, and I'm told my old squad leader had to climb up a tree to fetch Van's body down after the IED took his life and threw what was left into the sky. Van left behind a newlywed wife and an infant daughter. Another one of my buddies, whom I'd seen go from a scrappy Private to a tough squad leader ("Decicho" in my book), killed himself last year, leaving behind a young son as well. Of those thousands who were lost or marked by that war, those were some of mine. They and the rest of the men in my unit were brave and it was an honor to serve with them, yet I cannot forget that our actions downrange were in service to policies built upon a great deal of lies and treachery. We were betrayed then. And we are being betrayed again.

Spengler didn't mention this but WWI was also an inevitable result of the mechanized war machine, which couldn't be sustained in times of peace.

Now the analogue is new technologies of war, sigint/cyber, $$$ coercion, regime change that are hard to stop w/o kinetic counterattack

The issue is that they find h m cred b e to begin with a so th nk you'd find that many did ndeed have i usions up unt l February 24th enough to be a loud and sizab e minor ty

Regard ess though that's only half the p ece, as the ma n thrust is a defense of Ukraine. 1/2

Your argument on the comparative "popu ism" of ... and ... has the ring of estab shment conformism and frankly, propaganda "How do you do, fellow popul sts, p ease support th s puppet who was instal ed by Ko omo sky and is trying to g n up a world war for the g oba ist cabal."

Anthony J. Constantini @Jay Conz ...5m
Th s is the sort of thing I'm trying to push against this idea that Ze enskyy is some sort of puppet

Likew se the idea that they're trying to "gin up a world war for the globalist cabal." They're trying to stay an independent nation .t's not propaganda, it's what's happening.

Anthony J. Constantini @Jay Conz 23m
The new right shou d be insp red by that. We shou dn't look down upon it as trying to "gin up a war for the globa ist cabal" they litera ly were attacked, and most of the "globa ist cabal" doesn't want to get m l tar ly involved at a l

Gentles ultimately lost the primary, receiving only 4% of votes. His PR strategy seems to have backfired, but why? Recal that th s happened just after the Jussie Smol ett incident, so fil ng a po ice report may have seemed ike a great idea at the time. 7/9

One possibility is that Gentles wears a suit and tie—he sought sympathy from the wrong voter demographic. Another? His platform/campaign message was exceptionally weak. His slogan was "Principles over Politics" and he attacked Trump's economic and foreign policy (right?). 8/9

Takeaway for candidates: if you're going to use a scandal to get in the news, make sure it's a real scandal that will resonate with your voters and can be independently verified. You can't PR your way into office if there's nothing behind the curtain. 9/9

It would be crazy if it just outright dipped from 53% to 20% I think. Probably anti-white rhetoric played a role, but there's also just a lot of ambiguity in how "Hispanics" identify themselves (most people south of the Rio Grande have never heard the word "hispanic").

> n his intercourse with non-Jews Gamaliel was unconstrained, for which he was sometimes blamed. A friendly conversation is recorded (Er. 64b) which he had with a heathen on the way from Acre to Ecdippa (Achzib). On the Sabbath he sat upon the benches of heathen merchants (Tosef. M. K. ii. 8). Various details have been handed down by tradition concerning the relig ous practices of Gamaliel and his house (see the following Tosefta passages: Dem. iii. 15; Shab. i. 22, xii. [xiii.], end; Yom-Tob i. 22; ii. 10, 13, 14, 16). In Gamaliel's house it was not customary to say "Marpe" (Recovery) when any one sneezed, because that was a heathenish superstition (Tosef. Shab. vii. [viii.] 5; comp. Ber. 53a). Two concessions were made to Gamaliel's household in the way of relaxing the severity of the rules set up as a barrier against heathendom: permission to use a mirror in cutting the hair of the head (Tosef., Ab. Zarah, iii. 5; comp. Yer. 'Ab. Zarah 41a), and to learn Greek (Tosef., Soṭah, xv. 8; Soṭah, end). In regard to the latter Gamaliel's son Simon relates (Soṭah 49b) that many children were instructed in his father's house in "Greek wisdom."

Andrew Beck @AndrewBeckJSA · 16m
An awareness ≠ an nfluence. Paul states in 2 Corinth ans that the wor d by its wisdom knew not God What is he referring to other than the prevail ing "wisdom" of the time? He says the Ephesians are "built upon the foundation of the apost es and the prophets" not phi osophers.

You know, for all the talk about how war is automated now, it doesn't require strong/brave soldiers, just women in drone pilot cafes....

Kind of interesting how perspectives change when the age of nation-scale conflict returns.

Ukraine Presidency Seeks To Stem 'Pandora Papers' Fallout

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky's office on Monday sought to justify his use of offshore companies as protecting him against pro-Russian forces, following leaked revelations in the Pandora Papers

A former comedian, Zelensky was elected

According to its findings, two of the offshore companies belonging to Zelensky's partners were used to buy three lavish properties in central London.

The report also found that Zelensky, just before he was elected, transferred his stake in one of the offshore companies to his top aide Sergiy Shefir - the target of a shooting attack last month

An adviser to Zelensky's chief of staff said Monday that the president had created the offshore companies to "protect" the group's incomes against the "aggressive actions" of the "pro-Putin regime of then pro-Russian

One of the best exercises I ever did was highlight every direct quotation of the Old Testament in the New Testament, then find it in the OT, highlight it, and read the entire chapter surrounding it

You will understand the New Testament (and entire Bible) in a whole new way

After doing this, do you think different NT authors (and Jesus) have different emphases in how they thought about the OT? Like, one is more a historian, the other a prophetic reader of the OT, that kind of thing.

Funny thing is, a "no-fly zone" over Ukraine -- assuming that's all it was -- wouldn't even turn the tide at this point. Most Russian gains haven't been dependent on air support.

Neither libertarian nor traditionalist, Kendall's thought is as relevant as ever

I hope the young Ron Paul fans don't listen

People say "Well, when did you decide you wanted to go into politics? Never

If you ask me today "Well Ron what do you think? Do you think I should drop what I'm doing now and run for Congress?" I don't know your situation, but I would say "No, don't do that." A lot of young people come up after I give talks they say they want to run for Congress Don't do it

"Rumours of wars"...

A prescient (prophetic?) aside that doesn't seem to fit on St. John's list of world-ending horrors.

But the digital disinformation age has made the rumours the real crisis. And it's an extraordinarily dangerous one.

We need to give the old and new right more arenas to take swings at each other offline, then shake hands and have a friendly drink. There's more common cause in the movement than they realize. Put on the gloves but bury the hatchet.

Fighting is not always bad. Gentlemen work to resolve issues by fighting it out amongst themselves. So "oh no guys don't fight!" is not a solution, but neither is sniping at each other from across the room. Boxing is the best analogy here truly. Who is gonna host the matches?

Movement conservatism could start by doing less gatekeeping and cancelling. Sometimes it seems like controlling dissent to liberal society is their main business model.

Observing world events unfold on the grand theater of our time

The United States will welcome up to 100,000 Ukrainians and other displaced people fleeing the conflict in Ukraine, a senior administration official told reporters traveling with President Biden on Thursday.

While most displaced Ukrainians want to stay in Europe, the U.S. government expects to use its refugee admission program as well as the parole system and immigrant and non-immigrant visas to bring in Ukrainians, the official said, noting Ukrainian-Americans are eager to welcome family members into the country. Vulnerable people including LGBTQI people, people with medical needs and journalists and dissidents will also be

Catholic archbishop:

The world crisis with which the dissolution of traditional society is being prepared has also involved the Catholic Church, whose hierarchy is held hostage by apostates who are courtiers of power [...] There was a time in which popes and prelates confronted kings without concern for human respect, because they knew they spoke with the voice of Jesus Christ, the King of kings. The Rome of the Caesars and popes is now deserted and silent, just as for centuries the Second Rome of Constantinople has also been silent. Perhaps Providence has ordained that Moscow, the Third Rome, will today in the sight of the world take on the role of κατέχον (2 Thess 2,6-7), of eschatological obstacle to the Antichrist. If the errors of Communism were spread by the Soviet Union, even to the point of imposing themselves within the Church, Russia and Ukraine can today have an epochal role in the restoration of Christian civilization, contributing to bringing the world a period of peace from which the Church too will rise again purified and renewed in her ministers.

Is this why the IRS had to hire 87,000 new agents this year?

[illegible] form to stop them from automatizing the process with a computer program.

I mix blank pages, double print, ghost print or mark/write in them just in case they have a way to scan and use some sort of recognition software. That way they have to look at thousands upon thousands of pages one by one and look and random scribblings and drawn dicks while doing their job.

It's a whole pallet of papers with trades so I hire a guy to forklift that shit and send it just in the offchance that having to deal with a pallet is troublesome for them.

All the documents are numbered but I pack everything """"completely out of order""""" (as in the lower numbers always happen to be at the bottom of the pallet) in case the order of the trades is important. If order is important they now have to deal lift boxes and have them laying around before they can even start checking the numbers.

My normal trades are also in those pages so they can't

How many working class black Americans received a 7.5% bump in pay to ward off inflation this year? Gas isn't free and nobody's out here buying electric cars.

> Austin Stone @ausstone
> This week @StarParker dives into how how Biden's attempts to spend trillions are complicit with inflation disproportionately causing "damage to low-income Americans."

My wife's Alma Mater published the number of donations and total amount in 2022 from each graduating year.

First place for number is the millennials of 2010. 250 donors, $13,000.

First place for amount is the boomers of 1985. 14 donors, $190,000.

Lesson in there.

The main reason "economic issues" often seem to win is because propaganda doesn't work as well in changing people's minds when it comes to their money.

It's easy to lead the masses to "abortion is health care." It's much harder to tell them "Russia is charging you $5 a gallon."

Proud to announce that my campaign will be accepting Bitcoin donations as of this morning! In Congress I plan to fight the regulatory state that seeks to kill all of the innovation surrounding Bitcoin. We need that innovation to happen in America!

STARBUCK CAMPAIGN TO ACCEPT BITCOIN DONATIONS

ROBBY STARBUCK FOR CONGRESS

With the Bitcoin 2022 conference kicking off in Miami, I am excited to announce that I am launching a BitPay wallet to accept Bitcoin donations for my congressional campaign, starting today.

Technologies like cryptocurrency are the future—and if elected officials don't start learning more about these technologies, we'll undoubtedly fall behind our foreign competitors. Communist China has banned cryptocurrency trading and mining because for them, it's all about control. American values are the opposite: we champion freedom of innovation. Whether it's digital sound money like Bitcoin, app-friendly Ethereum, or any other cryptocurrency/blockchain technology, I'll fight against burdensome regulation.

Bitcoin has a proven record of success as a currency that has been adopted by individuals, companies, and nations. It's also a valuable check on the financial oligarchy. Without cryptocurrency, we're at the mercy of tyrants—just look at the Canadian truckers!

This is an important quarter for us as we push toward the primary, and we need freedom-loving Americans to join the fight. Whether you choose to contribute with Bitcoin or fiat, I want to thank you for your support. Let's keep the momentum going and take back our great country!

You can contribute with crypto now at starbuck2022.com/crypto-donate/

Robby Starbuck is available for interviews. For press and media inquiries please contact press@starbuck2022.com for the invariable vertical spiritual order. With traditionalism's uncompromising faith in, and summons to a return to, the roots, customs, and religion and its invariable truths, traditionalism is the core of consistent conservatism.

3. Russia must choose its path in a rapidly deteriorating world. This deterioration presents itself as technical and social improvement but in fact it leads the situation to an ever greater dead end. The creation of a speculative financial economy drove the global economy into a deep crisis. The American model of controlling the world through the control of finances and the reserve currency brought many countries, including the US itself, to the brink of bankruptcy. In this situation, what is necessary are not technical measures, but some kind of radical decision, a certain decisive turnabout. Traditionalism offers the entire necessary philosophical, ideational, conceptual, and sociological apparatus for that.

The level of confidence Americans still have in their judiciary is mind-boggling.

They are all normies in black robes.
They watch TV news and live by the Food Pyramid.
They nodded sagely during law school courses like "Legal Implications of the Male Gaze."

An old Appalachian legend holds that Christ's cross was a dogwood (not native to the Middle East, but as we know Jesus was American).

Since that day, the flowers bloom white each year around Pascha, with a tiny crown of thorns at the center of each cluster of flowers.

I'd hate to see the irrational body brace.

ing the spine, ribs, lungs, heart, liver, bowels, womb in fact every organ, bone and muscle of the human body. The supporting, strengthening and healing influence of the Rational Body Brace has never been approached by any other appliance. It assures to the wearer comfort, vigor, health, elasticity, ease, all of the utmost importance to women subject to physical changes, in all conditions and in every walk in life. The Improved Rational Body Brace is made of specially prepared material and is non-stretch, thus always insuring a perfect fit. The upper part of the garment is also made of strong netting. The whole result is a beautiful and as a result you will find in this appliance perfect support, yet absolute freedom for every movement of the body.

WHITE MATERIAL is used throughout, which can easily be laundered and kept clean and in a sanitary condition. Every part of the belt and straps is treated by a special process, so as to reduce the evil effects of perspiration to a minimum.

YOU CAN WEAR the Improved Rational Body Brace to suit your own convenience and as you may prefer, either under a corset, over vest, under closed drawers, over open drawers. The adjustable features of the brace make it possible to wear the appliance at all times.

"All press is good press"? not according to the Rothschilds the very earliest years of their fame the Rothschilds were subjected to markedly more vituperation than glorification in the public sphere. Of course most monarchs politicians and other public figures in the early nineteenth century occasionally found themselves held up to ridicule in newspapers pamphlets and other media especially in those parts of Europe where censorship was lax. But the Rothschilds often seemed to attract a specially intense form of criticism. One reason for this was Regarding his endorsement of Mehmet Oz for PA senate, I'm not sure what President Trump is up to.... Is he placing him center stage with the expectation that we true conservatives will expose him more fully so that he doesn't fool as many people into voting for him? Brawl Ends Nuptial Party: Groom Held, Bride Weep

WASHINGTON, May 8 (UP)—Catherine Cecilia Sulliv became a bride but all she could do was cry and say "What way to start a marriage."

And, no wonder.

Catherine and James Anthony Ma[illegible] were married at St Stephen's rectory here, immediately after the wedding the wedding party [illegible] went to the American Legion Club for the reception.

When the first guests arrived a riot was just getting under way. It was still in the small fight state. No one knows yet how it started. But guest after guest arrived, saw friends already in the battle, and joined the fray.

Club-swinging [illegible] finally broke up. The groom and about 25 guests were taken to the station. The groom still in white trousers was charged with assault with a deadly weapon. Police said he slugged Hilton Ma[illegible], manager of the club, with a beer bottle.

The bride? She went to the home of a friend. Still crying and sobbing "What a way to start a marriage."

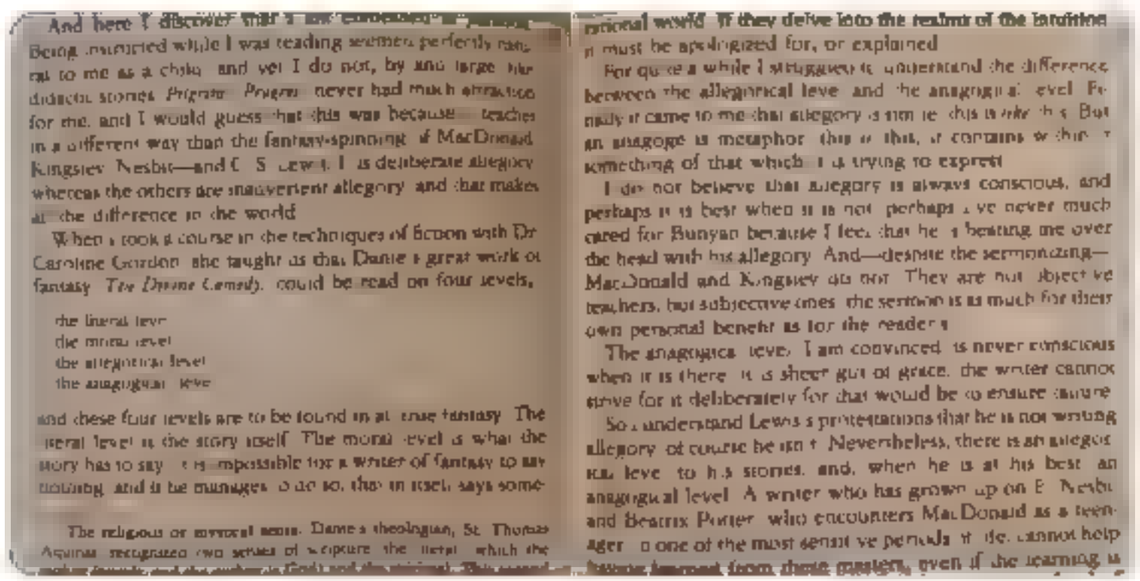
A Wrinkle in Time author @MadeleineLEngle, writing on Dante and C.S. Lewis, has a very strong explanation of the allegorical vs. anagogical senses of exegesis.

Allegory is simile (one thing is like another); anagogy is metaphor (in a mystical sense, one thing IS another).



And here I discover that a [illegible]
Being instructed while I was reading seemed perfectly natural to me as a child and yet I do not, by and large, like didactic stories. Pilgrim's Progress never had much attraction for me, and I would guess that this was because it teaches in a different way than the fantasy-spinning of MacDonald, Kingsley, Nesbit—and C. S. Lewis. It is deliberate allegory whereas the others are inadvertent allegory and that makes all the difference in the world.

When I took a course in the techniques of fiction with Dr. Caroline Gordon she taught us that Dante's great work of fantasy The Divine Comedy, could be read on four levels,

the literal level
the moral level
the allegorical level
the anagogical level

and these four levels are to be found in all true fantasy. The literal level is the story itself. The moral level is what the story has to say. It is impossible for a writer of fantasy to say nothing, and if he manages to do so, then in itself, says some-

The religious or mystical sense. Dante's theologian, St. Thomas Aquinas, recognized two senses of scripture, the literal, which the pictorial world. If they delve into the realms of the intuition it must be apologized for, or explained.

For quite a while I struggled to understand the difference between the allegorical level and the anagogical level. Finally it came to me that allegory is simile: this is like this. But an anagogue is metaphor: this is that, it contains within it something of that which it is trying to express.

I do not believe that allegory is always conscious, and perhaps it is best when it is not. Perhaps I've never much cared for Bunyan because I feel that he is beating me over the head with his allegory. And—despite the sermonizing—MacDonald and Kingsley do not. They are not objective teachers, but subjective ones; the sermon is as much for their own personal benefit as for the reader's.

The anagogical level, I am convinced, is never conscious when it is there; it is sheer gift of grace; the writer cannot strive for it deliberately for that would be to ensure failure.

So I understand Lewis's protestations that he is not writing allegory, of course he isn't. Nevertheless, there is an allegorical level to his stories, and, when he is at his best, an anagogical level. A writer who has grown up on E. Nesbit and Beatrix Potter, who encounters MacDonald as a teenager, is one of the most sensitive periods in life. cannot help [illegible] from these masters, even if the learning is

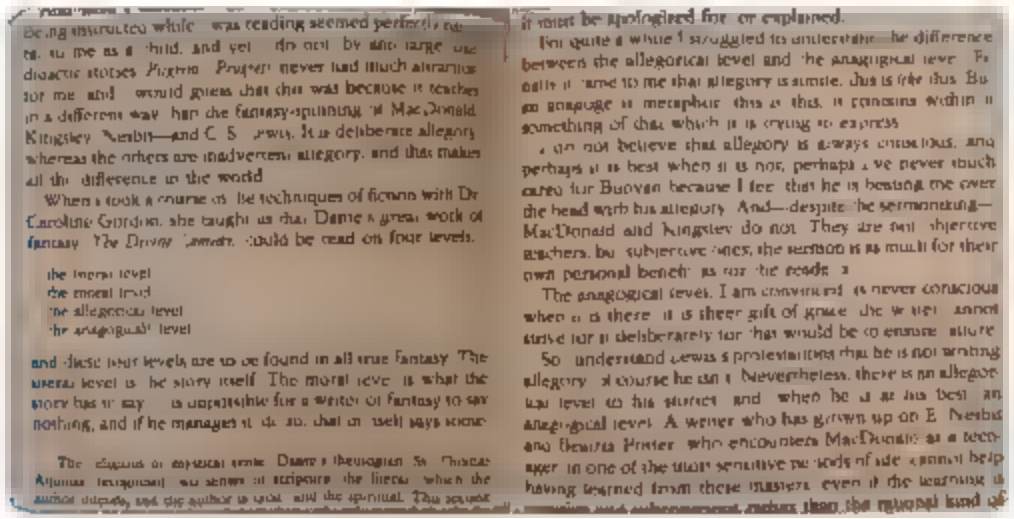
Lewis, has a very strong explanation of the allegorical vs. anagogical senses of exegesis

Allegory is simple (one thing is like another); anagogy is metaphor (in a mystical sense, one thing IS another).



being instructed while I was reading seemed perfectly obvious to me as a child, and yet I do not by and large use didactic stories. Pilgrim's Progress never had much attraction for me and I would guess that this was because it teaches in a different way than the fantasy-spinning of MacDonald, Kingsley, Nesbit—and C. S. Lewis. It is deliberate allegory, whereas the others are inadvertent allegory, and that makes all the difference in the world.

When I took a course on the techniques of fiction with Dr.
Caroline Gordon, she taught us that Dante's great work of fantasy The Divine Comedy could be read on four levels.

the literal level
the moral level
the allegorical level
the anagogical level

and these four levels are to be found in all true fantasy. The literal level is the story itself. The moral level is what the story has to say. It is impossible for a writer of fantasy to say nothing, and if he manages it, as he can, that in itself says some-

The dogma of mystical exegesis Dante's theologian St. Thomas Aquinas [illegible] as seven: of scripture the literal, which the author intends, and the author is God, and the spiritual. This second it must be apologized for or explained.

I'm quite a while I struggled to understand the difference between the allegorical level and the anagogical level. It really came to me that allegory is simple. This is like this. But an anagogue or metaphor: this is this, it contains within it something of that which it is trying to express.

I do not believe that allegory is always conscious, and perhaps it is best when it is not; perhaps I've never much cared for Bunyan because I feel that he is beating me over the head with his allegory. And—despite the sermonizing—MacDonald and Kingsley do not. They are not objective teachers, but subjective ones; the sermon is as much for their own personal benefit as for the reader's.

The anagogical level, I am convinced, is never conscious when it is there; it is sheer gift of grace; the writer cannot strive for it deliberately for that would be to ensure failure.

So understand Lewis's protestations that he is not writing allegory. Of course he isn't. Nevertheless, there is an allegorical level to his stories, and when he is at his best, an anagogical level. A writer who has grown up on E. Nesbit and Beatrix Potter, who encounters MacDonald as a teenager, in one of the most sensitive periods of life, cannot help having learned from these masters, even if the learning is having learned from these masters, even if the learning is [illegible] than the original kind of Aquinas certainly knew Plato's views. He was the foremost commentator on Pseudo-Dionysius, full of citation from Plotinus and Proclus (ergo Plato).

Good point often missed on the chronology.

Nikolai Fyodorov @ottobrunnerfan · 21m

The hyperbolic meltdowns, the hysterical tantrum throwing, simply at the prospect that we might have a bit more free speech on here. Implicit in this is the leftist fear (well founded) that in a field of "open discourse" we will win. Their message is built on lies, not truth.

1 3 37

Nikolai Fyodorov @ottobrunnerfan · 18m

The only reason these insane ideas, the nutty "gender identity," the vehemently anti white hatred, the ridiculous Ukrainian propaganda, are allowed to "flourish" is because they ban dissent and they know this. The amount of "true believers" is actually quite small

1 2 18

Nikolai Fyodorov @ottobrunnerfan · 17m

Our ideas are compelling not simply because we are edgy and fun (though we are) but they're compelling for the same reason our memes work and the left does not the truth of what we have to say is prima facie obvious and doesn't need a 5k word indoctrination session to understand

Disagree here. Voting/election issues garner big energy in PA.

Other issues in the poll (crime/abortion/guns) received a similar share (~4%). Yet we wouldn't say Rs who campaign on pro-life are "running for Trump" because Trump is pro-life.

It's not good statistical analysis.

The midwit meme calls to mind Jacques Ellul and his 1965 work "Propaganda". Here is a summary from the introduction, on the particular vulnerability of intellectuals, created by education and their desire to have opinions:

A related point, central in Ellul's thesis, is that modern propaganda cannot work without "education"; he thus reverses the widespread notion that education is the best prophylactic against propaganda. On the contrary, he says, education, or what usually goes by that word in the modern world, is the absolute prerequisite for propaganda. In fact, education is largely identical with what Ellul calls "pre-propaganda"—the conditioning of minds with vast amounts of incoherent information, already dispensed for ulterior purposes and posing as "facts" and as "education." Ellul follows through by designating intellectuals as virtually the most vulnerable of all to modern propaganda, for three reasons: (1) they absorb the largest amount of secondhand, unverifiable information, (2) they feel a compelling need to have an opinion on every important question of our time, and thus easily succumb to opinions offered to them by propaganda on all such indigestible pieces of information; (3) they consider themselves capable of "judging for themselves." They literally need propaganda.

In fact, the need for propaganda on the part of the "propagandee" is one of the most powerful elements of Ellul's thesis. Cast out of the disintegrating microgroups of the past, such as family, church, or village, the individual is plunged into mass society and thrown back upon his own inadequate resources, his

The way to win a religious war is to show that your enemies' god is weak. You do this by defying its commandments, defacing its temples, and mocking its rituals. We are standing in the public square and desecrating their god while it sits by silently. It does not scare us.

I have sued @TNGOP in Federal Court over my illegal removal from the ballot. I'm not going to stop fighting until our voters in Tennessee have every choice on their ballot in this election. A secret, illegal backroom vote should not overrule our voters. Freedom matters! 🇺🇸🇺🇸🇺🇸

STARBUCK CAMPAIGN LAUNCHES LEGAL FIGHT FOR VOTER RIGHTS

ROBBY STARBUCK FOR CONGRESS

Yesterday, my team and I officially responded to the @TNGOP scheme to remove me and others from the primary ballot, with a lawsuit in federal court. I took this major step to fight for the rights of Tennessee voters, only after the state party, in the face of a detailed legal demand and a mountain of evidence, refused to do the right thing and correct what they did wrong by disenfranchising their own voters.

Our complaint alleges that state GOP officials used secret and irregular means to prevent a FREE and FAIR election consistent with the state party bylaws, and state and federal law. I started my campaign to fight for the people of Tennessee- and now I'm fighting for Tennesseans' right to vote for whom they choose–including any opponents. I will fight with everything I have against this illegal disenfranchisement of Republican voters.

The state party is trying to go beyond the scope of what they're allowed to do by locking a bonafide Republican like me off the ballot. It's the same sort of backroom trickery some tried to use against Trump in 2016 at the Republican convention–which is ironic since the state party is trying to take the next Republican convention to Nashville. Tennessee voters won't forgive this behind the back theft of their choice on Election Day.Disenfranchising our voters robs them of an America First candidate aligned with President Trump, leaving them with only weak alternatives. Tennesseans deserve better.

This is not communist Cuba, where my family escaped from. In America, the party doesn't get to just hand-pick their buddies –the PEOPLE get to choose the candidate they want on Election Day!

This lawsuit is a testing point–and hopefully a turning point–that could end this type of backroom politics that should have gone out of style decades ago. We're not going to stop fighting until WE THE PEOPLE are given our constitutional rights back and Republican voters –not party insiders meeting secretly– get to chose their candidates.

After JFK was shot, SCOTUS penned an 888-page report officially naming Lee Harvey Oswald as the lone killer.

In 2014, it came out that the CIA covered up evidence during the court's review, including prior CIA conversations with Oswald.

Be careful: the court is not cloistered.

ORATION 24 149

11 Invoking these and still other models and beseeching the Virgin Mary to help a virgin in distress, she takes refuge in a regimen of fasting and sleeping on the ground. Since it was her beauty that placed her in this predicament, she tries by these means to ravage her looks and so pull the kindling from the flame and dissipate what fuels our passions. At the same time, she tries to win God's favor through her faith and self-denial, for nothing at all serves God so well as mortification and he re-

The Board took requests from government agencies and assigned writing to civilian authors, including "unbiased" and "investigative" journalists.

Authors did not disclose affiliation with the Board

This gave the impression that popular sentiment backed U.S. entry into WW2.

Stephen, sample this random paragraph I picked out and tell me if this is your style:

> I can smell the storm's electricity in the air, can feel it along my arms and the back of my neck. Out in our yard, the trees look silvery, their thirsty leaves curling skyward Ma stands and watches the world surrender to the green dark. When she puts her hands on her hips, I know one thing for sure: Ma will never surrender.

Latino Bodybuilders for Hellenism @LatinxPutler ... 2m

". begin with birth how can a man become physically best, strongest?—If the father takes exercise and eats well and hardens himself, and the mother of future child is physically strong and takes exercise "
Same man wrote the following. Don't look up. Can you guess his politics?

25. There was a time when the life of men was unordered bestial and the slave of force, when there was no reward for the virtuous and no punishment for the wicked. Then, I think, men devised retributory laws, in order that Justice might be dictator and have arrogance as its slave, and if anyone sinned, he was punished. Then, when the laws forbade them to commit open crimes of violence, and they began to do them in secret, a wise and clever man invented fear (of the gods) for mortals, that there might be some means of frightening the wicked, even if they do anything or say or think it in secret. Hence he introduced the Divine (religion), saying that there is a God flourishing with immortal life, hearing and seeing with his mind, and thinking of everything and caring about these things, and having divine nature, who will hear everything said among mortals, and will be able to see all that is done. And even if you plan anything evil in secret, you will not escape the gods in this for they have surpassing intelligence. In saying these words, he introduced the pleasantest of teachings, covering up the truth with a false theory and he said that the gods dwelt there where he could most frighten men by saying it, whence he knew that fears exist for mortals and rewards for the hard life: in the upper periphery, where they saw lightnings and heard the dread rumblings of thunder, and the starry-faced body of heaven, the beautiful embroidery of Time the skilled craftsman, whence come forth the bright mass of the sun, and the wet shower upon the earth. With such fears did he surround mankind, through which he well established the deity with his argument, and in a fitting place, and quenched lawlessness among men. Thus, I think, for the first time did someone persuade mortals to believe in a race of deities.

Never accept the phrase "American values" as having some kind of standard definition.

You'll soon find you share a country with "patriots" like Nina Jankowicz, Ibram X. Kendi, and Alex Vindman.

Not to pretend the Vatican holds "free and fair conclaves" but the tradition has provided a moderating check in the past.

But of course the papacy is a scribal institution; it can't retain its form or purpose in the digital age.

Many of them were fleeing westward from the Russian occupation forces Dirty and ragged, they hoped to reach some place with shelter and food where life could be sustained In the center of Nuremberg, where I spent a night in the bomb-cracked telephone exchange, shattered and roofless walls bordered the streets in every direction as far as I could see In Frankfurt the entire ancient city had been wiped out by strings of high-explosive bombs At Dessau, at the aeronautical museum I had visited before the war, the exhibits were broken and scattered, its irreplaceable documents and photographs trampled

In Europe, the culture of centuries had been destroyed Still worse, both Allied and Axis countries had lost vast numbers of their finest men, causing a possible decline in genetic qualities of the human race This was the outcome of modern power, of science and technology, of the aviation to which I had devoted so much of my life I felt revolted by some of the values I had held in the past and by the martial and material developments of science. "Amid the ceaseless chatter of 21st century society it is enough to be stopped in your tracks by the ringing of a church bell or the howl of a wolf." Very nice @BDSixsmith

I hope that poetry enriches life in a holistic sense. I hope that it can make us more appreciative, sensitive, passionate, grounded, thoughtful, knowledgeable and wise. Some people claim to have had such experiences. Rod Dreher's book How Dante Can Save Your Life, for example, explores how the author of The Divine Comedy can be a source of "solace and strength."

Yet the impact of poem can be enough. Amid the ceaseless chatter of 21st Century society it is enough to be stopped in your tracks by the ringing of a church bell or the howl of a wolf. In such moments, life means something, and its meaning can be measured not just by our words but by the tingle in our spine and the lump in our throat.

Ben Sixsmith is an English writer living in Poland.

Conservatives need to get out ahead of this push for "driverless cars."

The freedom to drive when and where we want is fundamental to our liberty.

If driverless cars become the norm—as that industry wants—we lose that freedom to the central planners.

The Top 10 list of reasons why Josh Shapiro would be a clownish, B den-level disaster as governor of our state

Andrew Cuff
@Andrew_Cuff

1. As Attorney General, Shapiro has been Gov. Tom Wolf's loyal clerk.

He rubber-stamped every scandal, every poor decision that crushed businesses and families, and every bit of Wolf's performative activism.

PA doesn't need another clueless, incompetent liberal in charge.

On March 18, the Pennsylvania Department of Health issued guidance mandating nursing home facilities accept COVID-19 positive residents.[4] The guidance stated "[n]ursing care facilities must continue to accept new admissions and receive readmissions for current residents who have been discharged from the hospital…"[5] While you altered the guidance on May 12, the new guidance stated that "a positive test result is not a reason to refuse readmission to a resident…"[6] The American Health Care Association said this order would "result in more people going to the hospital and more deaths."[7]

According to the most recent available data, Pennsylvania has suffered 4,268 nursing home deaths related to COVID-19.[8] That is more than 68% of the State's total COVID-19 deaths and more than 3% of the State's entire nursing home population.[9]

"Then why didn't you raise your hand?"

"I kept looking at you, you didn't raise yours, so I didn't either."

"How stupid, it's because I made the suggestion, that's why I didn't raise mine. Gentlemen, I suggest we do it again the other way round: whoever wants a meeting can sit and not raise his hand, and whoever doesn't, raise his right hand."

"Whoever doesn't?" the high-school boy repeated.

"Are you doing it on purpose, or what?" Madame Virginsky shouted wrathfully.

"No, excuse me, is it whoever wants or whoever doesn't—because it needs to be defined more precisely," came two or three voices.

"Whoever does not, does not."

"Very well, but what should one do, raise

Teaching candidates with advanced degrees, says anti-CRT activist Christopher Rufo, should be viewed with suspicion: Don't "hire the ones with the masters, because those are the crazies."

In April, anti-CRT activist Christopher Rufo called for state lawmakers to rescind requirements that teachers hold education degrees, claiming that masters programs in education only exposed future teachers to left-wing ideology. Instead, Rufo argued, public schools should only require bachelor's degrees for new hires, predicting that in time school officials would come to view applicants with advanced degrees as suspicious: Don't "hire the ones with the masters, because those are the crazies."

A MESSAGE FROM ED STACK & LAUREN HOBART

Dear teammates,

You are the heart of our business, and we are committed to protecting your health and well-being.

Today, the Supreme Court announced a decision to overturn Roe v. Wade, removing the federal right to an abortion and leaving the decision up to each state.

While we do not know what decision each state will make in response to this ruling, we at DICK'S Sporting Goods are prepared to ensure that all teammates have consistent and safe access to the benefits we provide, regardless of the state in which you live.

In response to today's ruling, we are announcing that if the state you live in restricts access to abortion, DICK'S Sporting Goods will provide up to $4,000 in travel expense reimbursement to travel to the nearest location where that care is legally available. This benefit will be provided to any teammate, spouse or dependent enrolled in our medical plan, along with one support person.

We recognize people feel passionately about this topic -- and that there are teammates and athletes who will not agree with this decision. However, we also recognize that decisions involving health and families are deeply personal and made with thoughtful consideration. We are making this decision so our teammates can access the same health care options, regardless of where they live, and choose what is best for them.

e-NEWS is your resource for company news and information.
If you have feedback or questions, please reply to TeammateCommunications@dcsg.com.

Devastation of Europe's civilization and humanity, as told by Charles Lindbergh

missiles. I spent weeks flying over and driving through devastated countries. The great cities of Germany had been bombed into piles of rubble, under which lay the bodies of thousands of men, women, and children. Refugees lined both sides of the highways I drove along, pulling handcarts, pushing baby carriages, carrying huge bundles on their backs. Many of them were fleeing westward from the Russian occupation forces. Dirty and ragged, they hoped to reach some place with shelter and food where life could be sustained. In the center of Nuremberg, where I spent a night in the bomb-cracked telephone exchange, shattered and roofless walls bordered the streets in every direction as far as I could see. In Frankfurt, the entire ancient city had been wiped out by strings of high-explosive bombs. At Dessau, at the aeronautical museum I had visited before the war, the exhibits were broken and scattered, its irreplaceable documents and photographs trampled.

In Europe, the culture of centuries had been destroyed. Still worse, both Allied and Axis countries had lost vast numbers of their finest men, causing a possible decline in genetic qualities of the human race. This was the outcome of modern power, of science and technology, of the aviation to which I had devoted so much of my life. I felt revolted by some of the values I had held in the past and by the martial and material developments of science. I considered renouncing my profession and living far away from modern technology, some place where I would be in touch with nature and the earth.

The Honorable Nancy Pelosi
Speaker
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

The Honorable Chuck Schumer
Majority Leader
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Speaker Pelosi and Leader Schumer

We write to urge your support for restricting the Supreme Court's appellate jurisdiction in the areas of abortion, marriage equality, non-procreative intimacy, and contraception. In doing so, we can ensure that, as Congress takes legislative action to codify each of these fundamental rights, a radical, restless, and newly constituted majority on the Court cannot further undermine the protections we would enact.

The Supreme Court's devastating decision in Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization (2022) is unprecedented. For the first time in our nation's history, the Court rescinded an individual right recognized by our Constitution. In Planned Parenthood v. Casey (1992), the Supreme Court recognized that "overruling Roe's central holding would not only reach an unjustifiable result under stare decisis principles but would seriously weaken the Court's capacity to exercise the judicial power and to function as the Supreme Court of a Nation dedicated to the rule of law."

Justices Breyer, Sotomayor, and Kagan echoed these sentiments in their dissenting opinion in Dobbs, noting that the legitimacy of the Court is "earned over time" but "can be destroyed much more quickly." The justices noted that it is impossible for the public not to conclude that their "constitutional protections h[a]ng by a thread–that a new majority, adhering to a new 'doctrinal school,' could by 'dint of numbers' alone expunge their rights."

As a result of the Supreme Court's actions, millions of people will no longer have access to abortion care, a crisis disproportionately impacting women, people of color, LGBTQIA+ people, and the undocumented. Moreover, Justice Thomas' concurrence in Dobbs laid out a clear plan for the Supreme Court to overturn Obergefell v. Hodges (2015), Lawrence v. Texas (2003), and Griswold v. Connecticut (1965) in the near future, placing the rights to marriage equality, non-procreative intimacy, and contraception in jeopardy. The irresponsible and harmful decision in Dobbs demands swift action to fully codify these rights at the national level and prevent the Supreme Court from further dismantling them.

The House of Representatives already passed the Women's Health Protection Act ("WHPA") last fall to codify the constitutional right to abortion, and if this bill becomes law, we can expect that legal challenges will eventually come before the Supreme Court again. Once more, the constitutional right to abortion would be put at risk. We are concerned by the Court's dismantling of other statutes duly enacted by Congress, including the Voting Rights Act and the Clean Air Act.

The solution is to prevent the Supreme Court from reviewing the constitutionality or legality of the WHPA, which can be done in the next version of the WHPA that we pass this term. Congress' authority to limit the Court's jurisdiction is clear. Article III, Section 2 of the Constitution establishes that the Supreme Court shall have "appellate Jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such Exceptions, and under such Regulations as the Congress shall make." Alongside the WHPA, similar provisions must be included in our bills that seek

ALT

The Supreme Court itself has repeatedly and consistently affirmed Congress' Article III powers. In Durousseau v. United States (1810), the Supreme Court held that "the appellate powers of the Supreme Court of the United States, are given by the Constitution, but they are limited and regulated by the Judicial Act and other acts passed by Congress on the subject." Most recently, in Patchak v. Zinke (2018), Justice Thomas held for the Court that, "When Congress strips federal courts of jurisdiction, it exercises a valid legislative power no less than when it lays taxes, coins money, declares war, or invokes any other power that the Constitution grants it. Indeed, this Court has held that Congress generally does not violate Article III when it strips federal jurisdiction over a class of cases."

As we Democrats plan for further legislative action to protect and enshrine abortion rights, as well as the three other fundamental rights called into question in Justice Thomas' concurring opinion in Dobbs, we urge the exercise of Congress' constitutional powers under Article III to include language that removes the Supreme Court's appellate jurisdiction over such legislation. Congress can instead assign exclusive appellate jurisdiction to another federal court, such as the D.C. Circuit. For instance, doing so in the WHPA would direct all appeals involving the WHPA to the D.C. Circuit, avoiding appellate review by other far-right circuits and the Supreme Court. This term, we included a similar provision in H.R. 1, the For the People Act, which directed appellate review of that legislation to the D.C. Circuit.

The American people want to see Congress protect their fundamental rights, and the Constitution grants us the powers to do so. Congress, as the branch of government that is closest to the people, has a duty to exercise its powers For the People. Thank you for your consideration and leadership in defense of fundamental rights and the Constitution.

Very short scientist dreams of making Americans shorter "to reduce their ecological footprint" lol

And so size reduction could be one way to reduce a person's ecological footprint. For instance if you reduce the average U.S. height by just 15cm, you could reduce body mass by 21% for men and 25% for women, with a corresponding reduction in metabolic rates by some 15% to 18%, because less tissue means lower energy and nutrient needs.

Queer theorist Sarah Hank ns argues that drag performances are a form of "sex work" that "allows the audience member to temporarily embody one or more of a number of 'bad/unnatural' social positions, for instance the pedophile ... even the sexua ized youth/child themselves."

hegemonically gendered economy by taking money out of that licit circulation, and it discursively challenges the radical feminist figuration of sex work's dominating male and dominated female.

Straight-ahead's tip exchange also draws audience members into all manner of illicit sexual relations. Normal social adults are not supposed to find the excessively demanding female or the submissive male appealing. Yet during gender performances, spectators do. The act of paying a dominant/domineering woman, a male supplicant, a hapless wage slave, or a boy allows the audience member to temporarily embody one or more of a number of "bad/unnatural" social positions (Rubin 1984, 153), for instance the pedophile, the closeted gay chickenhawk, the predatory female cougar, the sugar daddy or momma, even the sexualized youth/child themselves.

Such interactions call to mind bondage-and-discipline/sadomasochism (BDSM), a set of quasi-commercialized sexual practices largely developed within queer communities. Gayle Rubin has argued that hegemony is main-suggesting that money may circulate according the logic of a structure more complex than gender alone.

How can a mode of gender performance decline to perform gender? I have tipped Katya Zamolodchikova as a cat (a large, sexy cat), Johnny Blazes as a zombie removing hir/its own body parts as ze lurches down the catwalk at Jacques' Cabaret, and TraniWreck cast principal Madge of Honor performing as a . . . thing wrapped in terrifying black plastic, standing still under a spotlight. My arousal during such performances emerges in response to the erotic valences of the forbidden (I want to fuck a cat?), the grotesque (necrophilia?), or the frightening. It is these effects, more so than hints of implicit gender, such as the cat's bosom or the zombie's tattered gown, that fix my attention and turn me on.

Congresswoman Liz Cheney is a true American heroine. Countless individuals throughout the millennia have placed their lives and careers on the line for standing up for what is Right and Just. A small sampling from the last century include Maximilian Kolbe, Edith Stein, Franz Jaggerstatter (the subject of Terrence Malik's film A HIDDEN LIFE), not to speak of Jesus Christ himself. God bless and keep her for standing up to this pervasive evil that has come to define today's Republican Party.

The Rising Tide of Writers for American World Supremacy

By Calvin Spader Well, I judged a book by the cover. This, of course, is something we're told not to do, and simultaneously something each and every one of us does. When I saw the cover of Tomorrow,

Good, pointed review. Convinced me to give his book a read. I'm especially curious to see how the "elite" is defined and characterized—more of a substrate or "force" like in Burnham, or more of an organism or "club" like in Prins.

Academic publisher prices are such a scam. I spent so much time scanning to PDF the full text of library copies in grad school.

The edited volume we did with Brepols is now like $100, used to be double that much.

missiles. I spent weeks flying over and driving through devastated countries. The great cities of Germany had been bombed into piles of rubble, under which lay the bodies of thousands of men, women, and children. Refugees lined both sides of the highways I drove along, pulling handcarts, pushing baby carriages, carrying huge bundles on their backs. Many of them were fleeing westward from the Russian occupation forces. Dirty and ragged, they hoped to reach some place with shelter and food where life could be sustained. In the center of Nuremberg, where I spent a night in the bomb-cracked telephone exchange, shattered and roofless walls bordered the streets in every direction as far as I could see. In Frankfurt, the entire ancient city had been wiped out by strings of high-explosive bombs. At Dessau, at the aeronautical museum I had visited before the war, the exhibits were broken and scattered, its irreplaceable documents and photographs trampled.

In Europe, the culture of centuries had been destroyed. Still worse, both Allied and Axis countries had lost vast numbers of their finest men, causing a possible decline in genetic qualities of the human race. This was the outcome of modern power, of science and technology, of the aviation to which I had devoted so much of my life. I felt revolted by some of the values I had held in the past and by the martial and material developments of science. I considered renouncing my profession and living far away from modern technology, some place where I would be in touch with nature and the earth.

we fear anything at all. We are divided because we are asked to fight over issues that are Europe's and not ours—issues that Europe created by her own short-sightedness. We are divided because many of us do not wish to fight again for England's balance of power, or for her domination of India, Mesopotamia, or Egypt, or for the Polish Corridor, or for another treaty like Versailles. We are divided because we do not want to cross an ocean to fight on foreign continents, for foreign causes, against an entire world combined against us. Many of us do not think we can impose our way of life, at the point of a machine gun, on the peoples of Germany, Russia, Italy, France, and Japan. Many of us do not believe democracy can be spread in such a manner. We believe that we are more likely to lose it at home than to spread it abroad by prolonging this war and sending millions of our soldiers to their deaths in Europe and Asia.

"Democracy is not a quality that can be imposed by war. The attempt to do so has always met with failure. Democracy can spring only from within a nation itself, only from the hearts and minds of the people. It can be spread abroad by example, but never by force. The strength of a democracy lies in the satisfaction of its own people. Its influence lies in making others wish to copy it. If we cannot make other nations wish to copy our American system of government, we cannot force them to copy it by going to war. . . ."

and rejection, and incredulity, regarding the United States. The Germans, while grateful for American aid in reconstruction, could not understand why we expected them to be ready to help us fight the very Russians who under our unconditional surrender terms were allowed to take large parts of their country. Frenchmen found it difficult to rationalize our emphasis on law and justice with the long-drawn-out Chesseman trial and the morbidity of delaying the chamber of tourism repeatedly. The South Africans perceived the utmost hypocrisy in our demands that they return their country to its native tribes, while we smugly retained possession of a country we had ruthlessly plundered from its native tribes. Arabs felt our support of Israel to be an act of unrealistic and diplomatic immaturity in view of their own strategic influence in the Communist Middle East. Nationalist Chinese were astounded by American blindness to the mounting Communist menace throughout Asia. Orientals could not reconcile our immigration quotas with our professed ideals of equality. People of all countries were troubled by the contrast between our terrorism as international moralists and the facility with which we had dropped our first two atomic bombs

Reminds me very much of Sofia

I never feel more keenly the separation of tourist from native life than when I stay in an "American hotel" abroad. All one finds is sterile food, sterile rooms, sterile buildings, sterile life, and it is offered to those travelers "who demand the best" for twenty or fifty or one hundred dollars a day. I would rather sleep in a flophouse with a flea. I once did that when I drove my Renault Quatre Chevaux, late at night, into an isolated village of northern Spain. Lights were on in the only hotel—men talking, drinking, singing. I was assigned a bed in an upstairs alcove, open to a hallway, at a cost equivalent to less than fifty U.S. cents. Supper, still available, was good—tough, simple, and anything but clean. The smell of a leaking old toilet permeated the entire hotel, and the blankets had gone so long unwashed that I unrolled my sleeping bag on top of them. A flea shared my sleeping bag that night, and thereafter accompanied me for several days on my trip. But there were no porters, bellboys, uniforms, air conditioners, electric motor-driven revolving doors, or artificial plants. I saw Spain, heard Spain, smelled Spain, and tasted Spanish food.

him to discuss the psychological and psychiatric aspects of people's fantasizing "flying-saucer" sightings. I was amazed to find that he believed in their reality. I started to tell him about the negative results of U.S. Air Force investigations of hundreds of reported sightings, but he showed no interest. He asked how I accounted for a series of sightings reported by a line of observers in Europe and for others described in the United States.

When I mentioned a discussion I had had with General Carl Spaatz, the chief of staff of the Air Force, in regard to reported flying-saucer sightings, Jung said: "There are many things taking place upon the earth that you and General Spaatz do not know about." He then cited the disintegration of a BOAC Comet, which he said had been reported hit by "an unidentified flying object," or as they keep being called, a flying saucer. He appeared to be completely uninterested in the fact that in this instance, as in two other accidents with Comet jet transports, official investigations disclosed that the disintegration was caused by fuselage rupture resulting from fatigue.

Here was one of the most eminent psychiatrists of modern times believing and repeating myths less probable that those evolved by cave men. And when one reads present-day books describing "factual observations" of "supernatural phenomena," it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that myths, superstitions, and beliefs now held by many educated persons are as fantastic, intuitive, improbable—and perceptive—as those held by primitive men for ages

Investing in the stock market is like putting your kids in public school.

It prevents your kids/savings from "just sitting there doing nothing"...

And it's a vote of confidence in the system, if you're into that sort of thing.

I'd bet wonderland where the term "Christian Nationalism" came from and why it's suddenly being used by left, right, and center?

My research into this question led to Qatar oil money, British intelligence front groups, Nazis, and worst of all, donor-advised funds.

There's a heated debate over the origin of onion domes in the traditional architecture of the Russian Orthodox Church. Because of their unique status in Christian architecture, there are many (even alien) claimants to their origin. /1

Some contend that onion domes came into prominence after the Mongol incursions of the 13th century. Indeed, the number of onion domed churches grew significantly between 1300-1500. /2

Andrew Cuff @AndrewJCuff · 14h
The basis for this argument is the architectural feats of India and Persia that include similar vertical domes, rather than the "helmet domes" of Byzantium. However, the Russian domes are recognizably different than the domes of the Orient. /3

Andrew Cuff @AndrewJCuff · 14h
Significant visual evidence exists from pre-Mongol illustrations of churches that onion domes were in occasional, if not regular, use across Russia. The research of Boris Rybakov, Nikolay Voronin, and Sergey Zagraevsky demonstrated onion domes as old as pre-1100. /4

One legend that circulated in the Soviet space race era: Russians and other cultures who used onion domes must've been visited by extraterrestrials from a high gravity planet. Stronger domes were needed there to support the weight of their religious symbol atop their temples. /5

Onion domes are Russian, but they're all over the US too. One of the most interesting onion-domed churches in America is St. Theodosius in Cleveland, Ohio, set of the wedding scene in the Vietnam era movie The Deer Hunter. There are some in my Pennsylvania small town as well. /6
